- Medication-assisted treatment (MAT) for opioid recovery

What is coaching in myStrength and how does it work?

In the myStrength program, you will be able to interact with Teladoc Health expert coaches trained in mental health engagement via text through the Teladoc app. Coaches will help you navigate through the myStrength programs and offer support in better engaging with myStrength.

Does myStrength really work; how can someone with intense back pain or an addiction to drugs get support from an app?

Yes. For conditions that require medication, they have been shown to be more effective and to have longer term effects when combined with psychotherapy techniques such as those offered in myStrength.

What types of resources are available within myStrength?

- Interactive, self-paced learning activities and walkthroughs
- In-the-moment tools for coping
- Guided meditation exercises

Is there a charge to use myStrength?

There is no cost to you to use myStrength.

How does the program work?

myStrength can be accessed through the Teladoc app or website. Once signed in, you'll be asked to fill out a number of questions so that we can tailor recommendations specific to you and your needs. From there, you'll be able to begin programs and their associated activities at your own pace, however slowly or quickly you'd like to go!
